The oratorical contest at the auditorium of the Normal drew a large crowd Tuesday evening. The 400 seats were filled, beside the chairs, which filled the corners, and standing room was almost at a premium. The stage was beautifully and artistically decorated with paper boughs, palm leaves and immense wreaths of roses and other flowers. Professor Matthews made a few opening remarks, welcoming the people and explaining the conditions and rules governing the contest. The thought and construction of the oration was judged and marked by three competent judges in Phoenix, who knew nothing of the persons involved. Three more judges were chosen to decide on the delivery and, together with the former judges' marks, make the award. These judges were Rev. Whitaker, Rev. Bird and Attorney Zuck. After Prof. Matthews' remarks, and a chorus selection, "Farewell to the Forest," the main features of the evening began, and the following orations were delivered: "America and the New Age," Alma Lewis; "Why I Am Glad I Am an American," Miss Florence Ford; "Greek Education," Harry Brainer; "Our Attitude Toward England," Miss Ethel Wilbur; "More Than One Political Party an Advantage," Noble Carter; "Arizona in the Sisterhood of States," Miss Bessie Hedgepeth. Each contestant was frequently applauded.

Mr. T. E. He has visited over the eastern part of the valley and admires the water system and is thinking somewhat seriously of making his home here in the near future. He took his father and family entirely by surprise. They had not seen him in twenty-eight years.

An impetus is given grain planting by the recent rain. It is estimated that 400 acres will be planted under the Highland and Consolidated canals, and all tracts obtainable are being sowed to wheat and barley under the Mesa, Utah and Tempe canals. Dr. A. J. Chandler has raised 2,800 pounds per acre on land that never received a drop of water after it was planted. H. S. Phelps also raised a good crop with only one irrigation and he is firm in the opinion that the crop would have been just as good had it not received the irrigation.
